Art Unit: 2115

1. This action is in response to the application filed on February 6, 2004. Claims 27 and 28 are pending. Claims 1-26 have been canceled.

2. The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

3. Claims 27 and 28 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the enablement requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to enable one skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and/or use the invention. The specification does not describe the recited transition from the stop state to the operation state is independent of inputting the data to the another processor/block. The examiner could find no description of the above independent transition limitation anywhere in the specification other than the claims. In addition, all of the drawings show that all data is input through the first processor (the another processor/block). The specification describes that the first processor activates the second processor in order for the second processor (CPU) to transition from the stop state to the operation state. The specification and drawings indicate that applicant's system was designed so that the second processor (CPU) is dependent on the first processor (the another processor/block) to activate the second processor in order for the second processor (CPU) to transition from the stop state to the operation state. The specification and drawings fail to describe or show any of the circuitry required to perform the claimed independent transition. It would take undue experimentation for one of ordinary skill in the art to make and use the above claimed processor wherein a transition from the stop state to the operation state by the CPU is independent of inputting the data to the another processor/block.

4. Claims 27 and 28 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the written description requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to reasonably convey to one skilled in the relevant art that the inventor(s), at the time the application was filed, had possession of the claimed invention. As described above, the specification does not describe the recited transition from the stop state to the operation state is independent of inputting the data to the another processor/block.

5. Any inquiry concerning this communication or earlier communications from the examiner should be directed to Dennis M. Butler whose telephone number is 571-272-3663.
